My expertise includes antitrust and merger control, distribution law, commercial litigation, unfair practices and also telecommunication law and energy law.

After one year in the Cardiff School of European Studies, I graduated from the Political Studies Institute of Strasbourg (Sciences-Po Strasbourg) in 2007, and hold a master's degree in EU business law from the University of Strasbourg (2009). I was admitted to the Paris bar in 2014.

Before joining Fieldfisher Paris office, I worked in YGMA as an associate (French law firm specialized in telecommunications and energy), and had previously developed a significant know-how in major law firms in Paris (including several from Magic Circle) and within the Court of Appeal of Paris.

I am involved in several associative activities within the AFEC Jeunes (youth committee of the French association on competition studies) and the International League of competition law (LIDC). I have published several articles in English in the e-Competitions review.

I speak French, English and Spanish.
