As a Knowledge and Information Services Officer I support all of the firm's legal teams with their research enquiries, however, I have a particular focus on the Intellectual Property and Technology departments. The Knowledge and Information Services team provide database training, company intelligence, current awareness and legal research assistance. Further to all of this, I am responsible for the firm's hard copy resources.

I have a BA in English Literature from Durham University and have worked in the Legal Information profession since my graduation. I started my legal information journey as the firm's Knowledge and Information Trainee and have since graduated that programme to become a fully qualified Information Officer. To add depth and breadth to my understanding of the legal sector I then completed the BIALL Legal Foundations course at the University of Westminster.

I enjoy getting involved with the Fieldfisher community and so I sit on the firm's Environment and Women at Work committees. Over the last few years, I have played a leading role in the firm's sustainability initiatives and I am particularly proud of our recent partnering with The Converging World environmental charity. In 2019, I won the Fieldfisher Eco Champion award for my contributions. The Women at Work committee has allowed me to meet individuals from right across the firm and to get involved in the promotion of a number of related charitable initiatives. I take part in the firm's Reading Partners scheme and I also run the Fieldfisher choir as I just love to sing!
