My main focus is to advise project developers, financial investors, banks and energy supply companies on the realization of national and international energy and infrastructure projects and related litigation. In particular, I assist my clients with renewable energy transactions.

Prior to joining Fieldfisher, I worked as a lawyer in a well-known law firm specializing in energy law in Munich for two years. I first gained in-depth knowledge of energy law during my two years as a trainee and research assistant in the corporate/energy team of an international law firm in Hamburg.

I have been admitted to the bar in Munich since 2014. I completed my legal traineeship in Lower Saxony, Hamburg and Toronto, Canada. I studied in Dusseldorf and Jaén, Spain.

I speak German, English, Spanish and French.

I like to spend my spare time outdoors with good friends and family on horseback and in running shoes. I love to travel the world and get to know different people and cultures.
