I am a Senior Associate in the Technology, Outsourcing and Privacy group in Fieldfisher's Hamburg office. Prior to that, I gained several years of valuable practical experience as a legal counsel in a leading European IT management consultancy working in the areas of IT law, data protection and public procurement law.

My practice is focused on the data-driven business models of ad tech businesses and international data transfers. I advise start-ups as well as global corporations on privacy related issues, particularly when it comes to selling their business on the market and dealing with regulatory requirements I am also continuously involved in proceedings with competent data protection authorities and if the case may be in court proceedings.

Along with regularly drafting and negotiating various kinds of privacy contracts I have managed several extensive compliance projects and most recently in 2019 worked on a Europe-wide data protection audit of multinational technology company.

In addition to the above privacy law practices I provide legal advice in relation to public IT-related tenders and support international clients during the procurement procedures and negotiations on IT-contracts.

I advise my clients in German and English.
