I have over 16 years' experience in secured and unsecured lending, focusing on real estate finance. As a transactional lawyer I advised banks, funds and private equity investors as well as corporate borrowers on a range of loan finance transactions. I have both private practice and in-house banking experience in the UK and Australia.

More recently I have been a professional support lawyer with responsibility for identifying technical and commercial developments relevant to finance lawyers generally and providing information and commentary both internally and to clients.

I also produce and update precedent documents and organise and present training internally and externally. I am a regular contributor to Fieldfisher's real estate finance blog – REFlections from the Riverbank.

Outside of the office I have somewhat disparate interests in a range of sports (most actively cycling) and garden design.
