I am a corporate associate based in Fieldfisher's London office. I work with clients in the UK and overseas on mergers and acquisitions, joint ventures, business transfers, restructurings, inward investments, and corporate governance matters. This includes advising both public and private companies, directors, shareholders, and investors.

I enjoy working with deal teams across Fieldfisher's specialist departments and overseas offices to ensure that every transaction is tailored to the situation at hand and the client's desired outcomes, providing real value rather than just creating a paper trail.

Recently this has included:

- working with a team from Fieldfisher's London, Paris, Amsterdam, and Brussels offices to advise Tristel plc on the acquisition of its distribution business Ecomed Group, including co-ordinating advice from each jurisdiction to accommodate variances in market practice and structuring the deal to account for the implications of potential future Brexit scenarios
- advising a US investment company on the acquisition of a UK LLP, including a bespoke sale and purchase agreement for the transfer of the membership interests and rollover of management into a US affiliate of the buying company
- working with a US real estate investment company in relation to the corporate structuring of its various investments into student accommodation projects across Europe, to create a structure that is most efficient to account for ongoing funding requirements, property management, and corporate governance obligations.

My particular sector experience spans technology, energy and natural resources, life sciences, and real estate focused transactions. However, I am always interested in meeting new people from all sectors and jurisdictions to explore ways in which we can work together.

Outside of work, I enjoy yoga, travelling, exploring London's restaurant scene, and being engrossed in a good book/podcast.
