I'm lucky enough to work with some of the world's biggest brands and technology vendors as well as some of the most innovative growth tech businesses. I value collaborative working and achieving long term, win-win solutions for our clients. This requires a combination of legal and technical expertise, pragmatism and knowing what's important.

My experience ranges from business process and IT outsourcings, software development and licensing (including open source) and system integrations to cloud deployments, e-commerce and consumer contracting. I also regularly advise on the deployment of technology in regulated environments as well as on new and innovative tech such as AI and automation, distributed ledger technology and augmented reality.

I have spent significant time working in house for FTSE 100 and global corporations and so understand the pressures and competing demands on in house counsel, the need to get things done and the importance of understanding the key drivers of the business in any transaction.

I am named by Legal 500 as a key practitioner and Next Generation Partner for IT and Telecoms.
