I regularly represent clients in resolving their issues in the IT industry both for developers and for customers and help them navigate through the often highly complex wording of IT contracts. My experience in the IT sector has given me exposure to a wide range of clients including start-ups and large global corporates. It is imperative in such a fast-moving industry to be able to deal with matters in a speedy, efficient and cost-effective manner.

I also assist clients with issues arising out of the sale and purchase of businesses. I have recently succeeded in getting a claim struck out due to a technicality as well as recovering significant sums for clients due to misrepresentation prior to the sale of a business.

I try to avoid court if possible and have participated in over 300 mediations, most of them with a successful conclusion.

What others say...
