Professional Profile and Bio

Hakim is an experienced litigator in all areas of intellectual property law (copyright, trademarks, patents, designs and trade secrets).

He also litigates matters in the area of technology law, such as internet service provider liability, domain name disputes and unfair trade practices, including matters involving the protection of reputation of companies or individuals.

Hakim advises clients in IP-rich transactions, such as technology transfer, software licensing, consulting, outsourcing, brand protection and film production/distribution.

His experience in all IP-rich and/or highly regulated sectors has involved me working with clients from the media and telecom sector, the life sciences sector (with spin-offs from universities, start-ups as well as multinationals), the consumer products/retail sector, the high-tech sector, the sports sector and the energy sector.

Hakim has been involved in many high-profile IP litigation proceedings where he successfully represented clients such as Vitra, Studio 100, Puratos, Telenet and Tomorrowland.

Together with his team, he has been recurrently ranked in Chambers Europe and Legal 500, as well as in "IAM Patent 1000" - The World's Leading Patent Practitioners and the "WTR 1000" - The World Trademark Review directory.

He graduated from the Catholic University of Louvain and completed a Master in Intellectual Property Law at the Catholic University of Brussels, as well as a LL.M in Law, Science & Technology at Stanford University. He is a member of the editorial board of the Belgian IP law journal IRDI and the technology law journal RDTI.
